Elias Krell is a trans-genre, multilingual singer-songwriter who combines eclectic life experiences with a musical style that rides the line between folk conventions and queer pop quirkiness. They wrote their first song at the ripe age of 27, and have released five albums while maintaining an academic career that combines Latin American culture, music and women’s studies at Vassar College. They mostly live in New York’s Hudson Valley, writing, recording and performing music, always peeling back more layers of who they are as an artist.

Krell’s warm and versatile voice sparkles in both the folk, pop and Latin American songs. Nice and enjoyable album.”
